JI warns of protest if issue of heavy traffic fines not resolved through dialogue

KARACHI: The Jamaat-i-Islami (JI) on Monday warned that if the "issue of e-challan is not resolved through dialogue", the party would have no option but to take to the streets.

This was said by JI chief Hafiz Naeem ur Rehman while inaugurating a healthcare unit in Gulberg Town and laying the foundation stone of Shahrah-i-Naimatullah Khan in Azizabad. Earlier, he also inaugurated a Youth Centre and Family Park in Gulshan-i-Iqbal.

Hafiz Naeem said that the Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP), despite ruling Sindh for 17 years and controlling local bodies, has failed to address Karachi's civic and transport issues. "Launching only 400 buses in 17 years cannot solve Karachi's transport crisis," he said, adding that many of these buses were not even operational.

He lamented that Karachi, which contributes "54 per cent of Pakistan's exports, 67pc of national revenue, and 95pc of Sindh's budget", has been deprived of its rights. "Roads are broken, gutters overflow, and while a traffic fine costs Rs200 in Punjab, it goes up to Rs5,000 in Karachi," he said.

"Only 10pc of the city's traffic police are local citizens, and due to poor transport, over five million people are forced to ride motorcycles," he added.

Criticising the Sindh Solid Waste Management Board, Hafiz Naeem said it still operates under outdated UC boundaries. "Political contractors have destroyed this city. Projects like the Red Line BRT and Karimabad Underpass face years of delay, while roads such as Jehangir Road and 7,000-Foot Road remain in ruins," he added. "More than half the city lacks clean drinking water, the tanker mafia thrives, and citizens suffer from 18-hour loadshedding."

Despite "limited authority," he said, JI's elected representatives were striving to improve the city. "In two years, we have restored 171 parks across nine towns, rebuilt 43 government schools, installed over 100,000 streetlights, created model neighbourhoods, introduced free Wi-Fi, and started water harvesting systems," he said. —Staff Reporter

Artist tears up listening to Palestinians' plight

Culture minister inaugurates The Earth Song

By Peerzada Salman

KARACHI: The young artist from Comoros, Yaz, has gained quite a bit of fan-following among art lovers in Karachi ever since his artworks made with ballpoint attracted attention during the Peace and Pieces (volume 1) exhibition that opened at the World Culture Festival on Saturday.

On Monday evening he was part of a discussion titled Art as a Bridge along with Domi Forest (Sweden), Niharika Momtaz (Bangladesh) and Adrian Bojko (Argentina). When asked by the moderator Shahid Rassam about his inspiration as a self-taught artist, Yaz said, "I'm my own teacher… One day, I saw my uncle make a portrait [which led him to draw]."

Going down memory lane, he said in the beginning he drew with a pencil. "[But] one day I used a ballpoint. I really liked its sensitivity and texture. From then on, I have used the ballpoint."

In the same session, Bojko, responding to a question, chanted 'Free Palestine'. It made Yaz emotional. He teared up listening to the discussion on genocide.

Later, talking to Dawn, the artist from Comoros said he gets sad when he hears about what's happening in Gaza. "And everyone's lips are sealed."

Climate change is one of the two major themes that the World Culture Festival 2025 is concentrating on. It is in this context that a group show titled The Earth Song at the council's Caf D'Art — curated by Farrukh Shahab, Jamal Ashiqain and Umaina Khan — which commenced on Monday garnered a great deal of attention from the media.

It was inaugurated jointly by Culture Minister Syed Zulfiqar Ali Shah and the council's President Ahmed Shah.

Shedding light on the exhibition, Mr Shahab said, "It's a bit nonconventional show in the sense that it is not taking place in a gallery space. It's being held in an established area. It has exhibits made by both senior and junior painters."

He said the title The Earth Song is to do with celebrating planet earth and highlighting environmental issues. "For that we invited paintings and gave the theme to the artists. It's all new stuff. It features works of 18 artists."

Mr Shahab said, "The exhibition will run for a couple of weeks."

The last item on the programme list for late Monday evening was a stage play A Moment performed by the University of Diya, Iraq. It's directed by Mohammad Khalis Ibrahim.

Young man gunned down

KARACHI: A young man was gunned down on main University Road early Monday morning, police said.

Mobina Town SHO Mohammed Nawaz said that the 20-year-old victim, Abdullah Panhwar, and his friend, Asif Ali Channa, were returning home on a motorcycle to Makhdoom Bilawal Village, Scheme-33, after having tea at a restaurant near NIPA Chowrangi.

However, some armed pillion riders opened fire on them near a petrol pump on University Road. Abdullah sustained a single bullet wound and died from excessive bleeding. He was initially taken to Dow University of Health Sciences, Ojha campus, where doctors pronounced him dead on arrival. Later, his body was shifted to the Abbasi Shaheed Hospital for medico-legal formalities.

The officer suggested that the real target of the attackers was Asif Channa, who survived the attack.

He added that the police have registered a murder case against one named suspect, Sajjad Khaskheli, and another unidentified suspect, based on the complaint filed by Asif.

The complainant said that Sajjad Khaskheli had a monetary dispute with his father, as the suspect had borrowed money but had not returned it. —Staff Reporter officers would coordinate with PIDCL to address technical matters related to the project.

"The chief minister has directed his officials to share details about issues such as water lines, drainage, and footpath repairs with PIDCL and resolve them," Mr Iqbal said. "I am confident that work on the project will resume very soon."

He highlighted that former prime minister Nawaz Sharif had launched the first phase of the Green Line at a cost of Rs29 billion, while Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif initiated the second phase — a 1.8-kilometre extension worth Rs5.5bn — which had been delayed due to legal complications that have now been resolved.

The federal minister said three new stations were being added under the extension, with an emphasis on preserving Karachi's cultural character.

"We want to complete this project as soon as possible so Karachiites get maximum transport relief. Karachi is the only city to receive such a major transit infrastructure project as a federal initiative," he added.

Earlier, Sindh Minister Jam Khan Shoro confirmed that the provincial and federal governments had agreed to resolve the issues delaying work on the Green Line extension, saying the dispute was only a matter of coordination.

Responding to a query, he said the KMC had raised objections over a 1.8-kilometre stretch of the project. "There were issues related to drainage, water supply, and footpaths because the work was being carried out under an NOC issued back in 2017," he explained.

Mr Shoro said the chief minister and Mr Iqbal had met to address these concerns.

"It was only a coordination issue," he reiterated. "The chief minister has assured that a focal person will be appointed to coordinate with PIDCL, and the matter will be resolved soon," he added.
